On May 5, Germany's Constitutional Court ruled that both the European Central Bank (ECB) and the Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU) exceeded their mandates in their actions in recent years.

Does this ruling weaken the CJEU relative to national courts, challenging the EU's legal and political order? Does it restrict the ability of the German central bank to participate in the common monetary policy? How does it affect the integrity of the euro area and the independence of the ECB?

Greetings:

Dr. Maya Sion Tzidkiyahu, Co-President, Israeli Association for the Study of European Integration (IASEI), Hebrew University of Jerusalem

Chair:

Dr. Tal Sadeh, Head of EU Studies, School of Political Science, Government and International Affairs, Tel Aviv University

Speakers:

Dr. Katarina Barley, Vice President of the European Parliament (S&D) and former Minister of Justice, Germany

Prof. Erik Jones, Director of European and Eurasian Studies, School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University
